Q: Javascript textarea value changes - why is it counting more than once? This is a very simple example, but it is very interesting to me why this code is behaving strangely. I am passing a select option in as a string from the URL. So, in this case '1' is the ID of the record I am selecting, and the value is (for example) "Jake". This works as expected, but when I iterate through the options, my textarea value is changing in the textarea 3 times - like this: 1 2 3 4 My code: 1 2 3 4 I've used this in many places without this odd behavior. What is happening? A: To prevent the select from actually selecting a value, call `this.options[this.selectedIndex].value` oncha nge="document.getElementById('txtLog').value=this.options[this.selectedIndex].value;" Update - using the explanation given by Barry, this version only selects the selected option and properly changes the textbox: 1 2 3 4 You had onchange="document.getElementById('txtLog').value=this.options[this.selectedIndex].value;" which is actually setting document.getElementById('txtLog').value=this.options[this.selectedIndex].value;"
