What's new in Charset Crossfire:

Twelve months ago, a spirit of death came to me. That spirit of death was the one that left Tamayr's Daughter and cast her down to begin her earthly journey in Hell, but it was not its agent that came to see me, for that devil was sent to take that spirit back with him to Hell. I met with that devil in my dreams, and I saw that he would take that spirit back with him if I did not find the next Confessor. I knew that she would be in one of the sacred places of the spirit world that I believe belongs to the Ancient Ones. That is where I found her. How I sense how dark a place that was! The eternal night, which that devil had brought there for her! Why it seemed like she had been there for an eternity, I do not know for certain. There it was that I found her, and even though I feared it would be the longest of my lives to fight such an opponent, I set out to find that spirit of death, that witch, that evil that had taken my granddaughter's soul away. What did I find? A she-devil, the ancient one from whose spirit that one had stolen the life that should never have belonged to another. Once again she had taken my life's blood, and if she had the strength to unleash this evil horror against me, who knew what other evils she could bring forth? That is how I met her; that is how I was smitten! I killed her. She died. In my hands, like a knife, I took that devil's life and cast her from these eight planets, but, despite the marks of the angel she had left on my life, I had made sure that the next Confessor would not be a dire threat to my soul, for I had locked her behind eight worlds where she could not touch me. It should have been impossible to harm me, but the same darkness that had come to take Tamayr's Daughter, it also caused her enemy to enter my dream and make my fighting against her invincible. Could she have found a way to bind a devil to herself? I do not know, but I cannot say that it was not possible to cast something of evil into the deepest parts of Hell's realm. Was that devil using the Ancient Ones to bind her own power? These questions may never be answered, but I have taken a step in the right direction, and there are others to follow. Even though she was

Q: Manually editing an XML file in PHP? I am new to this whole XML and PHP world, but I am writing a script for work that has to read and modify an XML file of a certain format. In my research I am finding that I have to create the XML file in PHP first, then read that, then edit it, then write it again as the XML. I can either create the file and then manually edit it, or write the file to a database and then edit it. For some reason I feel like the former is a cleaner way to do this? As I have read, the former will prevent me from having to manually create the XML before hand and also leaves the potential for the format to change. What would be the correct way to do this, and how does the order of things matter? A: PHP code should not be used for this. Use a standard library for XML parsing and writing. If your XML format was documented, then it would be safe to do this manually, and you can try the alternative approaches as well. However, this is a good case for using XMLSerializer, which has no problems with reusing the same file for writing.

Polymerization of isobutylene and polyisobutylene homopolymer in the presence of Lewis and Bronsted type acids are known in the art. The use of boron trifluoride in this reaction is also well known. Heretofore, boron trifluoride has been used for polymerization of isobutylene because it has high activity per mole of acid and is more active than the other Lewis acids. See, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 2,973,276, U.S. Pat. No. 3,163,603 and U.S. Pat. No. 3,159,613. However, boron trifluoride is extremely corrosive and difficult to handle and extremely hazardous to store as a liquid. Alternatively, the use of hydrogen fluoride in the polymerization of isobutylene is also known. However, this process usually results in the formation of a significant amount of catalyst in the crude polymer produced. See, for example, U.S. Pat. No. 2,886,713 and U.S. Pat. No. 3,170,826. Where the corrosiveness of hydrogen fluoride precludes its use, boron trifluoride and other Lewis acids would appear to be the only alternatives for the polymerization of isobutylene. Isobutylene polymers have been prepared using a process involving a somewhat different catalyst, viz., the beta.-diketiminic catalysts of catalysts based on chromium(III) halide and alkyl aluminum halide.
