It inspired many imitators. The Phantom of the Opera - Wikipedia Phantom of the Opera (French title: Le Phénomène) is a 1925 French silent thriller musical fantasy film directed by Gaston Raquet and starring Jeanne Doillon, Richard Lack and Jules Berry. Raquet's acclaimed adaptation of Gaston Leroux's novel, based on stage performances by the real-life French tragedienne Anna Warner (who played the title character in her first stage appearance), was the first film to openly and directly reference the mystery of the Phantom of the Opera, and was greeted with both critical acclaim and box office success. Raquet's version follows Leroux's main narrative (where the Phantom is a business card-less figure named Monsieur Defarge) but adds a love story between Roubaud and a heroine named Madeleine. Critical reception to Raquet's film was overwhelmingly positive. The New York Times called it the "undoubted sensation of the season", while the United Press wrote, "This is a French masterpiece of suspense and it is in some ways the first 'great' film of the cinema, and I guarantee that few films can compare with it in the delirious brilliance of its technique".
