1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor device for reading or writing information through a change in the state of a power source current applied between electrodes thereof, and a method for producing the same.

2. Related Art Conventionally, a semiconductor device for reading or writing information through a change in the state of a power source current applied between electrodes thereof has been known. For example, there has been proposed a memory module as shown in FIG. 7. In this memory module, a memory chip 101 is provided at a central position between a pair of input/output terminals 102. The two terminals 102 are connected with a wiring substrate 103, which is provided on a base plate 104, through a contact point 105 and a lead wire 106. FIG. 8 is a plan view showing a part of the memory module in FIG. 7. The memory module has a structure in which a plurality of memory chips 101 are arranged in an array, and a single memory module is arranged on a base plate 104. The memory module is formed by arranging the memory chips 101 in four rows and two columns. The memory chip 101 has a memory array 111 provided with a plurality of memory cells connected with the input/output terminals 102 and a control circuit 112 for controlling the array 111. A part of the memory array 111 is shown in FIG. 8. A plurality of memory cells 1111 are connected to a row decoder 1121 in parallel. To connect all the memory cells 1111 in parallel, a plurality of word lines 1122 are arranged in parallel with the memory cells 1111. The word lines 1122 are also arranged in parallel with memory cells 1111 which are not selected. The control circuit 112 has a predetermined part which is not shown. A memory array 111 is realized by providing the control circuit 112 with the memory cells 1111. In FIG. 8, for example, when the control circuit 112
